

Health & Safety Audits

Understanding the value of auditing

Adopting successful health and safety management techniques enables an organisation to comply with legislation and guidance and has the potential to save substantial costs.

Without auditing, safety management techniques risk becoming outdated and unproductive.

Our courses are designed for managers and supervisors and enables delegates to gain a sound understanding of the processes of auditing health and safety performance as part of a safety management system.

The programme covers:

- Playing an important role within the audit team
- The role of the audit and the auditor
- Developing and improving an audit system
- Understanding both hardware and software health and safety elements

We also have experienced auditors who can offer knowledge, expertise and advice, and where necessary carry out audits.
